[英文提要]

In Zhao Zi-chen's theology, the ecclesiastical theology is significantly important. As early as in 1937, Zhao put forward the issue of Christianity's social concerns, which had formed the core of his theology from then on. Along with the core, his ideas of social philosophy, social ethics and other social theories developed respectively. Additionally, Zhao viewed church as "a society in the society". According to him, "Christianity should establish its institution, its organization, its church and its theology." Based on this view, Zhao talked about God, Christ and Salvation.
